

Paola Pittia is Full Professor of Food Science and Technology at the Department of Bioscience and Technology for Food, Agriculture and Environment and Deputy Rector for Internationalisation the University of Teramo (Italy).

Her research activity is focused on conventional and innovative food processes, technological functionality of food biomolecules and the development of new and sustainable food ingredients and formulated foods with improved health and stability properties. Co-author of more than 180 papers published on peer-reviewed national and international journals, more than 200 papers presented at Conferences and symposium at national and international level and published in either proceedings or book of abstracts, 8 book chapters. Over 20 years of activities in Higher Education and Training in Food studies within Erasmus and Erasmus+) projects (Thematic Network, Knowledge Alliance and Capacity Building, Forward Looking) with a main expertise in curriculum development and innovative teaching tools in Food Studies. She is and was President of the ISEKI-Food Association (www.iseki-food.net) (2023-ongoing, 2014-2020) dealing with activities to favour research-education-industry interactions and fellow of the IUFOST (International Union of Food Science and Technology) Academy.

Title of lecture: Innovation and sustainability as drivers of food systems transition